2013 Summer Law Fellowships

For the summer of 2013, the Williams Institute will award two or more summer law fellowships, including the Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship, which provide law students, or recent law school graduates, with a $5,000 stipend to work in the field of sexual orientation and gender identity law and public policy. Through the fellowship program, students gain experience and insight into the field and provide much-needed support to various organizations and scholars.

The Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship is committed to inspiring law students to pursue careers in sexual orientation and gender identity law and public policy. The Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship will support one fellow to work at the Williams Institute for at least ten weeks. The fellowship is made possible by a generous endowment gift to the Williams Institute by Mike Gleason and David Kettel.

Additionally, the Williams Institute will award one or more summer law fellowships to support fellows who spend at least ten weeks working with an eligible organization, scholar, or research center focused on sexual orientation or gender identity law and public policy.

Eligible Placements

Eligible placements include organizations, scholars, or research centers focused on sexual orientation or gender identity law and public policy. Examples of eligible placements include the summer internship programs of Lambda Legal, ACLU Lesbian and Gay Rights Project, the National Center for Lesbian Rights, Gay and Lesbian Advocates and Defenders (GLAD), the Transgender Law Center, and similar national and local organizations. Eligible placements also include summer research positions with law professors where the applicant will be spending the entire summer assisting with sexual orientation or gender identity law and policy scholarship.

Criteria for Selection

To apply for the fellowship, the applicant must be a current law student or recent law school graduate dedicated to a career in research, teaching, or advocacy focused on sexual orientation or gender identity law and policy issues. Selection criteria for the fellowship include a) academic record; b) demonstrated commitment to a career in research, teaching, or advocacy focused on sexual orientation or gender identity law and policy issues; c) the organization with which the applicant will be working; d) the work or projects that the applicant is proposing to complete during his or her fellowship; and e) the applicant’s potential as a future leader.
Preference will be given to applicants who have arranged a summer position with an organization before they apply for funding. The final award of funding will be contingent upon confirmation of placement with an eligible organization or research position.

Fellowship Award

The Fellowships will provide a stipend of $5,000 for the fellow to work full-time for ten weeks at an eligible placement (described above).

Application

To apply, please submit the application form below, a 1-2 page cover letter addressing the selection criteria listed above, a resume, and a law school transcript.

This year's application deadline is March 22, 2013.
