

2023 Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship

For the summer of 2023, the Williams Institute plans to award the Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship to provide a law student, or recent law school graduate, with a stipend of up to $6,000 to work in the field of sexual orientation and gender identity law and public policy.

The Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship is committed to inspiring law students to pursue careers in sexual orientation and gender identity law and public policy and to identifying the next generation of leaders committed to promoting rights and equity for the LGBT community. Through the fellowship, students gain experience and insight into the field and provide much-needed support to various organizations and scholars. Fellows must spend at least ten weeks at their placements.

Eligible Placements

Eligible placements include organizations, scholars, or research centers focused on sexual orientation and gender identity law and public policy. Examples of eligible placements include the summer internship programs of Lambda Legal; ACLU LGBT Rights Project; National Center for Lesbian Rights, Transgender Law Center, LGBTQ Task Force, state equality organizations; the Williams Institute; and similar national, state, and local organizations. Eligible placements also include summer research positions with law professors where the applicant will be spending the entire summer assisting with sexual orientation and gender identity law and policy scholarship. Candidates are responsible for securing their own placement with an eligible organization before being awarded a Gleason/Kettel Summer Law Fellowship.

Criteria for Selection

To apply for the fellowship, applicants must be current law students or recent law school graduates dedicated to a career in research, teaching, or advocacy focused on sexual orientation and gender identity law and policy issues. Selection criteria for the fellowship include a) academic record, b) demonstrated commitment to a career in research, teaching, or advocacy focused on sexual orientation or gender identity law and policy issues, c) the organization with which the applicant anticipates working, d) the work or projects that the applicant is proposing to complete during his or her fellowship, and e) the applicant's potential as a future leader. The final award of funding will be contingent upon confirmation of placement with an eligible organization or research position. The applicant is responsible for securing their own placement; the Williams Institute plays no role in the application or hiring process for placements at other organizations.

Fellowship Award

The Fellowships will provide a stipend of up to $6,000 for the fellow to work full-time for ten weeks at an eligible placement (described above), but may take into consideration any other funding the student might receive through, for example, his or her school or the host organization.

Application

To apply, please submit the application form attached, a 1-2 page cover letter addressing the selection criteria listed above, a resume, and a law school transcript.

This year's application deadline is April 1, 2023.
